

Avoiding A Pet Store And Buying From A Rottweiler Breeder

A Rottweiler is an investment like any other pet and when you have made the decision that it is time to get a Rottweiler puppy you may want to talk to a reputable Rottweiler breeder and avoid a pet store.

A pet store is great for getting all kinds of supplies you may need for your pet but they should never sell living animals at a pet store and there are a lot of reasons why.

Then the puppies are pulled out of a cage and sent to a pet store and sold to you. This is just the beginning of the pet store horror story.

A reputable Rottweiler breeder is going to be able to answer your questions and help you get your new Rottweiler puppy off to a good start. The breeder has probably already started the puppy on its way to getting used to being in a home so that all of the excitement and noise of a new home won't overwhelm a dog from a Rottweiler breeder and your dog has a great chance at being a fun family pet.

A pet store clerk has no idea how to raise a Rottweiler and can offer you absolutely no advice at all on how to care for your new puppy and what you should do if anything happens. A pet store puppy has spent their life looking at people through a cage and will have a hard time adjusting to life in your home. All of the noise and excitement can make important tasks like housebreaking almost impossible.

A reputable Rottweiler breeder will monitor the health of the dogs they breed and they try to make sure that the puppies they sell are without disease and have no health problems. Unfortunately not all health problems can be seen when they are puppies but a breeder will work with you if health problems arise later in the puppy's life.

Pet stores are great for offering pet related products but until people stop buying their pets from pet stores then there will always be a very dark side to pet store animals. Before you buy a pet from a pet store you should do a little research and you will find that there are better alternatives than pet stores and puppy mills.

If pet stores would just settle on selling pet supplies and left the selling of live animals to qualified people who care then everything would be fine. But they do not do this and they insist upon keeping puppy mills open by selling their product. Do yourself and the future of puppies everywhere a favor and see a Rottweiler breeder for your next puppy.
