

No Package Holidays Necessary When Free Camping

If you are new to camping, your first thought might be to browse the internet for some package holidays specific to camping. Though in theory this could be a good first approach, you will want to look for camping sites in the general area you wish to visit.

However, paying for a campsite is not a matter of concern for some campers. Some prefer to experience “real camping” and choose free camping rather than reserving a campsite in advance.

At first glance, this may seem like the better way to go especially since it is cheaper. But, if you are considering free camping, there are some sacrifices you will need to make in order to get the benefits.

First, say goodbye to the amenities and camping luxuries you often find at campsites. Most campgrounds offer toilet blocks, hot showers a local store with food and items, among other conveniences. Choosing free camping may save you some money, but you will also be giving up these campsite conveniences.

Yet, enthusiasts of free camping will say that you get much closer to the great outdoors, nature and simple living.

When free camping, keep in mind that you must be sure to camp legally. This is the number one rule for free camping. It is not about finding a nice location and pitching your tent. Different countries have different regulations and rules for free camping, so be sure you know the areas that permit free camping and the ones that do not.

The internet is the best resource for finding free camping locations, which applies to an RV, caravan and a tent. Doing some research beforehand will definitely payoff. The last thing you want is to get into trouble by pitching your tent in an illegal location. For example, parks are great to get outdoors and enjoy nature but not your best option for overnight camping. A little research ahead of time will also payoff in that you will definitely have somewhere to stay at night, without the concern of getting in trouble.

Being prepared is always important when it comes to camping, but it is especially important when free camping and even more so if it is your first time. Be sure you bring such essential items like a cell phone (fully charged) in the event you need to reach someone for help as well as a first aid kit containing the basic first aid supplies.

You should always tell someone your plans, including where you plan to go and when you will return. If your trip is particularly long and you will be in a different location each night, you should call one person each day to let them know where you are and that everything is okay.

Free camping can be a great adventure, show you many places and loads of fun. There is just something about sleeping under the wide open sky each night, under the stars and in “free style” away from a campsite.

About the Author

Ken Morris routinely publishes articles on problems relating to costa blanca attractions. One can see his comments on costa blanca attractions and costa blanca tourist information here.

Source: <http://anythingaboutpets.com>