

What Do I Need To Decorate My Fish Tank

Your fish will be much more pleasing to look at and they will have a much needed places to hide and rest, if your fish tank is decorated.

Your dealer has a wide range and size of gravel they should be placed in the bottom of your fish tank. Your fish will look better in a darker colored gravel. You should use small gravel instead of larger pebbles but you can mix them if you want a good rule of thumb for the depth of gravel in your fish tank would be about 10 pounds per square foot of surface area. But be aware once you put all of your other decorations in your fish tank, you may not even see the gravel.

There are many choices for the background of your fish tank, printed scenes, mirrored backgrounds, or just about anything that you can tape to the back of your fish tank.

Your fish tank should have a centerpiece, rocks make great centerpieces. You can use them to build hiding spots in your fish tank. Or they can be used as stand-alone decorations.

Whether live or plastic, plants provide hiding places, shade, breeding spots, territories, and beauty.

Decorative driftwood, can be found in pet stores and are suitable for your aquarium. While collecting rocks driftwood and other items to placing your fish tank can be enjoyable and unique. Be careful, you never know whether you've cleaned out all the substances that can pose a danger to your fish.

You can also purchase air driven ornaments to go in the bottom of your fish tank. Like treasure chests that open and close, divers, and sunken ships. No fishing signs are cool also.

Finally your fish will be more comfortable and more pleasing to view the decorated fish tank backgrounds are attractive and hide cords. Plants rocks and gravel should bring out the colors of your fish. Take the time and enjoy setting up your fish tank.

About the Author

Learn more about fishtanks. Stop by Benjamin Coombes's site where you can find out all about freshwater fish tanks and what it can do for you.

Source: <http://anythingaboutpets.com>